selera putra, putrajaya

This 15,000 sq ft space is located beneath Dataran Putra at the heart of the new Government headquarters in Putrajaya. Overlooking the lake it provides for the installation of 13 new F&B outlets in a contemporary food court environment. Rather than providing a traditional model in terms of food stall layout, each individual outlet owner was encouraged to develop his own identity in order that a less repetitive solution could be achieved. The result is a series of cafes and food outlets both eastern and western, each with their own unique branding, who share common public dining space overlooking the lake at Putrajaya.

This outlet spans over two levels which provides for all day dining and drinks, rich in colour and adapts an existing premises into a cohesive and impressive entertainment environment combining use of sculpted surfaces and illuminated coloured panels and creating focal elements which help to articulate the space.

A new food court was created utilising approximately 30,000 sq ft of existing non-core retail space. 20 food outlets and 800 seats were provided and additional covered space was developed on the existing roof slab to allow both controlled air conditioned space and an outdoor terrace. The brief required a highly maintainable food environment catering to the local market with a practical and contemporary identity.
